

Magnus is a tremendously valuable component of the Campus and Community Radio community. His quiet presence, hard work, patience, technical knowledge and aptitudes, and his tremendous vision are invaluable to our station at CJSF 90.1FM, and I'm sure to Earshot and the NCRA as well. It always amazes me to see the quiet calm way he goes about his day to day and then to realize all of the things that he is doing. I've never met a better man for time and stress management. I look up to Magnus not only because of his 6 foot god knows what height, but because to me, he is a best example of how to lead and to contribute to an organization.

Though the achievements Magnus has compiled are beyond my grasp to talk about, I've known Magnus long enough to see how he makes it possible. When I first met him it was at a NCRA conference in St John New Brunswick, where he was on stage speaking on something related to the NCRA. I was well struck by how unassuming and casual he was. I never got to talk to him in person but I took note of that welcome energy he carried. Then, when I moved to Vancouver and saw his name as the CJSF manager, it was a big reason as to why I went there. His presence or, maybe better put, lack of presence, allows for everyone here at CJSF their best opportunities to meet their full expression and achieve the best they have. It's like Magnus is invisible hand of CJSF, and perhaps also community radio at large, that makes it all work.

Ryan Fletcher,
CJSF 90.1FM Training coordinator and host of Melodies in Mind

Ryan Fletcher
Melodies in Mind: Tuesdays 8 to 10 PM on CJSF 90.1FM, Sustainable Futures: Fridays 3 to 4pm on CJSF 90.1FM
www.unconformed.com, www.myspace.com/melodiesinmind