

Yafa-Zain Marouf is CKUT's youngest community news reporter. She began co-hosting and engineering CKUT's flagship news and culture magazine The Morning After during the Summer of 2013 at seven years old. Here she reports with Gretchen King, her mother and CKUT's former Community News Coordinator and current volunteer programmer.

Description: INTRO - On Friday, a community gathering in Pointe Saint Charles erased the racist attack on the neighborhood's longest mural, known as "La Pointe, all-dressed." Completed during the summer of 2013, the mural celebrates a diversity of local histories, cultures, and struggles. Just before winter, one of the largest faces was painted from brown to white during the night. Pointe Saint Charles resident & CKUT journalist Yafa-Zain produced this report. EXTRO - To view the mural in person, it is located on the corner of Knox and Hibernia, near Metro Charlevoix in Montreal's southwest neighbourhood Pointe Saint Charles. Or check it out online: <http://www.lecollectifaupieddumur.tumblr.com>