

Devin Pielle:

My name is Devin Pielle. I am 22 years old and am part of Sliammon First Nation. I am the First Nations Language Program Co-ordinator for CJMP, Powell River Community Radio. I have a 5 month old daughter who is my little gem. I have been involved in the First Voices project in Sliammon, and am active in my culture in my community.

The Documentary:

We Are Still Here reflects the stories of 6 Tla'Amin survivors and 2 community members among many, fighting for language revitalization.

Resonating Reconciliation is a project that engages community radio to help reconcile all Canadians with the history of Indian Residential Schools, to help build grassroots skills among community-based broadcasters in respectful reporting on the ongoing legacy of Indian Residential Schools, and provide a lasting record of survivors' experiences.
